

OSCOLA (Oxford Standard for Citation of Legal Authorities) style:

In-Text Citation:

In OSCOLA style, you use footnotes or endnotes to cite sources, which are typically represented by superscript numbers in the text. For example:

"The concept of judicial review has a long history in common law legal systems<sup>^1</sup>."

Footnote:

In the corresponding footnote or endnote, you provide the full citation details for the source:

<sup>^1</sup> Author's Full Name, Title of the Book (Publisher, Year) page number if applicable.

Bibliography Entry:

In the bibliography, you provide a full citation for the source, including all relevant details:

Author's Full Name, Title of the Book (Publisher, Year)

Here's an example:

Footnote:

<sup>^1</sup> John Smith, Judicial Review in Common Law (Oxford University Press, 2020) 45.

Bibliography Entry:

John Smith, Judicial Review in Common Law (Oxford University Press, 2020)

Keep in mind that OSCOLA has specific rules for legal citations, and it's crucial to consult the full OSCOLA guidelines for more details on citing various types of legal sources, including cases, statutes, and legal periodicals, as well as formatting and punctuation requirements.
