Stopping by Woods on a Snowy Evening" by Robert Frost

In this brief yet powerful poem, the poet describes stopping in a serene, snow-covered woods on a dark evening. The scene is tranquil, with only the sounds of the wind and snowflakes. The allure of the quiet, picturesque landscape tempts the speaker to linger, but a sense of duty and responsibility pulls them away. The final lines, "And miles to go before I sleep, And miles to go before I sleep," echo the dual nature of the speaker's contemplation—both a literal journey and a metaphorical reflection on life's obligations. The poem, with its evocative imagery and subtle exploration of life's choices, leaves a lasting impression on the reader.
