

Sample Summary of a Paragraph

Original Paragraph:

From Charles Dickens' "A Tale of Two Cities"

"It was the best of times, it was the worst of times, it was the age of wisdom, it was the age of foolishness, it was the epoch of belief, it was the epoch of incredulity, it was the season of Light, it was the season of Darkness, it was the spring of hope, it was the winter of despair, we had everything before us, we had nothing before us, we were all going direct to Heaven, we were all going direct the other way – in short, the period was so far like the present period, that some of its noisiest authorities insisted on its being received, for good or for evil, in the superlative degree of comparison only."

Summary:

Dickens, in the opening paragraph of "A Tale of Two Cities," contrasts the extremes of his era, highlighting the duality and contradictions present in society. The paragraph sets the stage for a narrative that explores the stark disparities between wealth and poverty, wisdom and foolishness, hope and despair. It serves as a thematic introduction to the overarching tension that will unfold in the novel, capturing the essence of a tumultuous historical period.
